Rhyme of the Fall of Berlin, about 4,000 lines of rhyme in eight-line stanzas chronicling the beginning of World War II, the battle of Stalingrad, the fall of Berlin, and the death of Hitler and Eva Braun, can be enjoyed by readers from the age of ten to the age of ninety and up, the author says. The reader must bear in mind the mock-epic nature of the poem when Hollenbaugh/Firebaugh compares himself to Homer, Byron and other great names. His immodest boasts notwithstanding, and despite the absurdities, the poet's rhyming skill manages to captivate the reader through stanza after stanza, with This gripping and teeming tale / That dwarfs the epic saga of Troy / And Melville's mightiest whale. Alternating between modern prose and a parody of the classics, the long poem sometimes paraphrases Homer, Dante, Taylor Coleridge, Milton, and unabashedly purports to quote Eisenhower and General Omar Bradley (Finer soldiers I never saw, speaking of the author and his comrades). Subtle, allusive, with occasional flights of soaring rhetoric, Rhyme of the Fall of Berlin can be favorably compared to other long-surviving and classic rhyming poems.
