Masquerade Ball Aaron Kubacak

At the masquerade ball joyful frivolity and clever disguise camouflage what lies beneath. Darkness, insanity, soul searching, desire, betrayal, hopes and fears can be found at the core of each attendee. In this second offering from writer, poet and artist, Aaron Kubacak, he examines each of these ideas in poetic gems, mined and polished, displayed on the dance floor for your reading pleasure. Masquerade Ball rediscovers gentility in a savage new landscape. This is an era where the neighbor next door uses a plane to make a fiery political statement, killing innocents (February Morning), where modernization threatens the elegance, simplicity and beauty of by gone eras (Love Between Ancients), a cold as ice addict makes a startling discovery--love (Winter Ditty) and where religion is no longer a refuge for the faithful, but is taken up as a standard to hate and propagator of confusion for the modern day Perseus (Deity). Many of these poetic hangers-on appeared in various places: toriamosmusic.com, the writer's own Cheaper Kind of Light poetry blogspot, The Stray Branch Literary Magazine and Sorcerous Signals and are now lovingly brought together in one ballroom along with chamber music, candelabrum, crystal chandelier and mask.
