With Nothing To Lose (Brakus) (Volume 3) J.B. Millhollin

Shot twice and lying face down in the Cumberland River would normally conclude the existence of most men. But using another of his many lives, Roy Brakus, with one foot in the grave, crawls out again, with his obsessions running rampant and his sanity on the brink of obliteration. Slowly and deliberately Brakus stalks his arch nemeses, Kat Rickter, seeking to end her existence once and for all. And Kat, after discovering in a most tragic manner that Brakus had survived her efforts to destroy him, uses every second of every day to first locate him and then finish the job she failed to successfully complete on the banks of the Cumberland. Unfortunately, innocent parties become entangled within the efforts of each enemy, resulting in devastating results for the victim and their families. Collateral damage, for both rivals, ultimately becomes clearly secondary to the successful conclusion of the mission. A battle to the death explodes between these two antagonists and only one will prevail. Neither can release their obsession to rid the earth of the other. ROY vs. KAT—ONE LIVES, ONE DIES.
